THE ETERNAL TRUTH OF THE WARDEN EMPIRE

ANTIMECH!

Trouble on the Coast

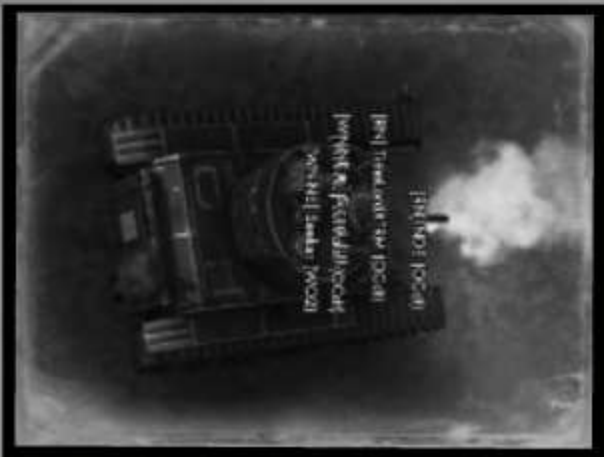

On January the twenty-third top-tier members of the Central Command Committee involved in the liberation of the Occupied Bloc that encompasses one side of the Farranac Coast requested Emergency Assistance after a Colonial Tank Division was spotted spearheading an attempt at further expansion into liberated sector of the Farranac Coast.

Dread Korps of Krieg Commissar Andrastate, was the initial Officer to Call for Arms within the Siege Regiment - but was soon after joined by Commander Razoor who collectively gathered a volunteer force of thirteen troops from different specializations within the Regiment.

Von Klaus, An Admiral within the Warden Navy committed to a call-to-arms to help defend the Coastline and worked alongside partisans and regimented infantry on land and sea in the prevention of further Colonial Dictation in un-occupied territory.

A.S.S was always seen operating in the general area, however, when reached out to refused to make any comments on the plans/efforts of what exactly they were doing during the combined operation. C.A.W was also spotted, however, also refused to comment on their activities.

Per usual, Warden Citizens and Partizan Forces were spotted assisting in the fighting en-mass and helped support the Mechanized Battalion and organized regiments push back the onslaught of occupiers in-order to uphold their own personal traditions shouting the Eternal Truth that the people of this great territory reject the attempts of the invaders.

"We lost alot of men in the attack, but that was a sacrifice I was willing to make."

- Commissar. Avitus Andrastate

WARDENS ABOVE ALL

SPIES ON THE RISE!

A recent epidemic of Colonial Spies have been implementing themselves within the ranks of Partisan Forces in an attempt to both disrupt the flow of supplies to the Front and prevent the creation and development of Ballistic Missiles (commonly referred to as 'Nukes').

We reached out to Apophis of the Callahans Armoured Wolves (CAW) to give us some tips on sorting friend-from-foe in organized regiments:

CJ = Commissar Jimbo

A = Apophis.

CJ: Recent reports have implicated that Colonial Forces are openly using spy tactics and foul-play to attempt to infiltrate and disrupt Warden Weapons Development and Supply Chains. As one of the main council members of Callahans Armoured Division, how do you take steps towards keeping those with hostile intentions outside of your Armoured Core?

A: If we have dedicated deep cover spys then it is of course quite hard to keep them away from anything, but the best thing to stop spies from infiltrating is, in my opinion, to know your members. I believe that someone you would call your friend can rarely keep up the disguise.

Although most spies were caught before causing too much damage- one spy who we've been advised to keep anonymous was recorded to have destroyed a plethora of supplies at Mooring Country Most of these supplies were Civilian, and lead to a food-shortage at Civilian Refugee Camps.

The story of 'Father' the Battle tank as seen by MrDrake

"So the story of 'Father' starts in Reaching trail on the 18th of January 2019 or at least for me, 82DK was doing an operation in Reaching attempting to break through enemy lines to the missile there, we had a tank commanded by @82DK- DarkLeftOvers, we managed to make a full breakthrough to their missile but our BT lost fuel and the infantry support died out so we died. Luckily for us Zack had a BT blueprint and we prepared another tank, this was the unnamed 'Father'. After we were ready we attacked through Pitfall with two LTs and the BT, we broke through the first line of defence and were met with another, after the BT getting one-to-two LT kills and us losing one LT to howi fire we pulled back. We got to Ice Ranch and got ready to attack again, I can't remember this very well and had to leave soon after but I heard at a point they took out a LT with only two members, Zack stayed up for hours protecting the tank. Now it was Saturday and we were preparing for the big operation, I don't know what happened in between but during the operation The tank loaded AP and with infantry support it took out a BT, Stayed back and then attacked with another tank. In this attack the two enemy BTs split up due to "miscommunication" I believe, anyway we took out both BTs sacrificing 1-2 LTs and a half track, the BT continued doing runs until the end of the operation when Zack stayed up again."

of the 82DK

The next day I woke to a destroyed Elk, enemy lost one LT to our two LTs but then they pulled out lacking tank support, in this time we decided to take the now named BT since Saturday out to attack Elk before we lose the region, we capped Elk, built up and attacked Eon Station. After this we got more support from ANZAC and randoms in the serve, attacked Reprieve, attempted attacks on Nightwatch and a final attack on the Nuke site that day where we died driving a final Spearhead into Mousetrap. A spearhead that we would take advantage of at a later time, The tank went down in a blazing fury with Mist the engineer fixing at his very best and Me, the gunner firing at as many colliers as we could until after what felt like five minutes of being in flames we went down in Glory, at this time Zack was sadly asleep leaving us with a different commander meaning he didn't see his tank die. This tank became so famous at four BT kills and ten plus LT kills, the colliers would call out Zack and ask him for a fight, this was truly tied top 1 as my best ever tank battles!

LADY OF FARRANAC

STORY FROM: [WN] Sicarii

WARDEN
PRESS

Alright, basically the partisan squad of the Warden Navy found an abandoned Battletank in Jade Cove on Saturday morning. We decided to siege VÍcta since the enemy presence was only made of infantry. We destroyed everything in that place and left it like that since we didn't have the manpower nor the resources to build up (A player named Agatha helped us as well by delivering fuel for our BT, also the nameless infantry men surrounded our tank to keep it away from AT Squads swarming from the bushes.. After that we took a 30 minutes break, only to find out distress calls from everyone that Farannac was under attack, since we were the only tank there we decided to act as the Vanguard in Jade Cove, there we've manage to eliminate two enemy battle tanks by sending the infantry to annoy them and giving us the opening to clear them swiftly, another distress call came from the Winged Walk bridge, a squad made out of a battle tank, a LT and riflemen managed to breach on our side, thus we moved there just in time to stop it.

We observed their behaviour and strategical approach to give us a hint of what we're facing off. Then we decided to wait for to push further more in order to flank and force chaos within their ranks. We've blown up the first LT in one single hit from the side, forcing the battletank to reverse back on the bridge, as it did that. We rushed in with some of the few infantry left around that held them back as much as they could.. We waited for the right moment, and it came, the BT pointed it's gun toward the infantry, and also drove it toward them so the HMG had a better aim, when that occurred, we charged in, landing the first hit on their side, then on their frontal armour and it was disabled, we kept firing while we saw the BT crew run in panic, while the few left tried to repair it.

We went back to Terra afterwards since the Colonials pushed from the Scythe bridge. Three battles tanks started to pour in, we took position on the far north of the city, preparing an ambush for one of them that might over extend, and it did.. We flanked them so hard that we caused a violent response from the enemy, they attacked Terra like mad animals and slowly pushed us back. CAW came in to support with their BTs but got demolished, we were once again left alone there.. I know it not might sound very good, but we fought in Farannac for 18 hours straight.

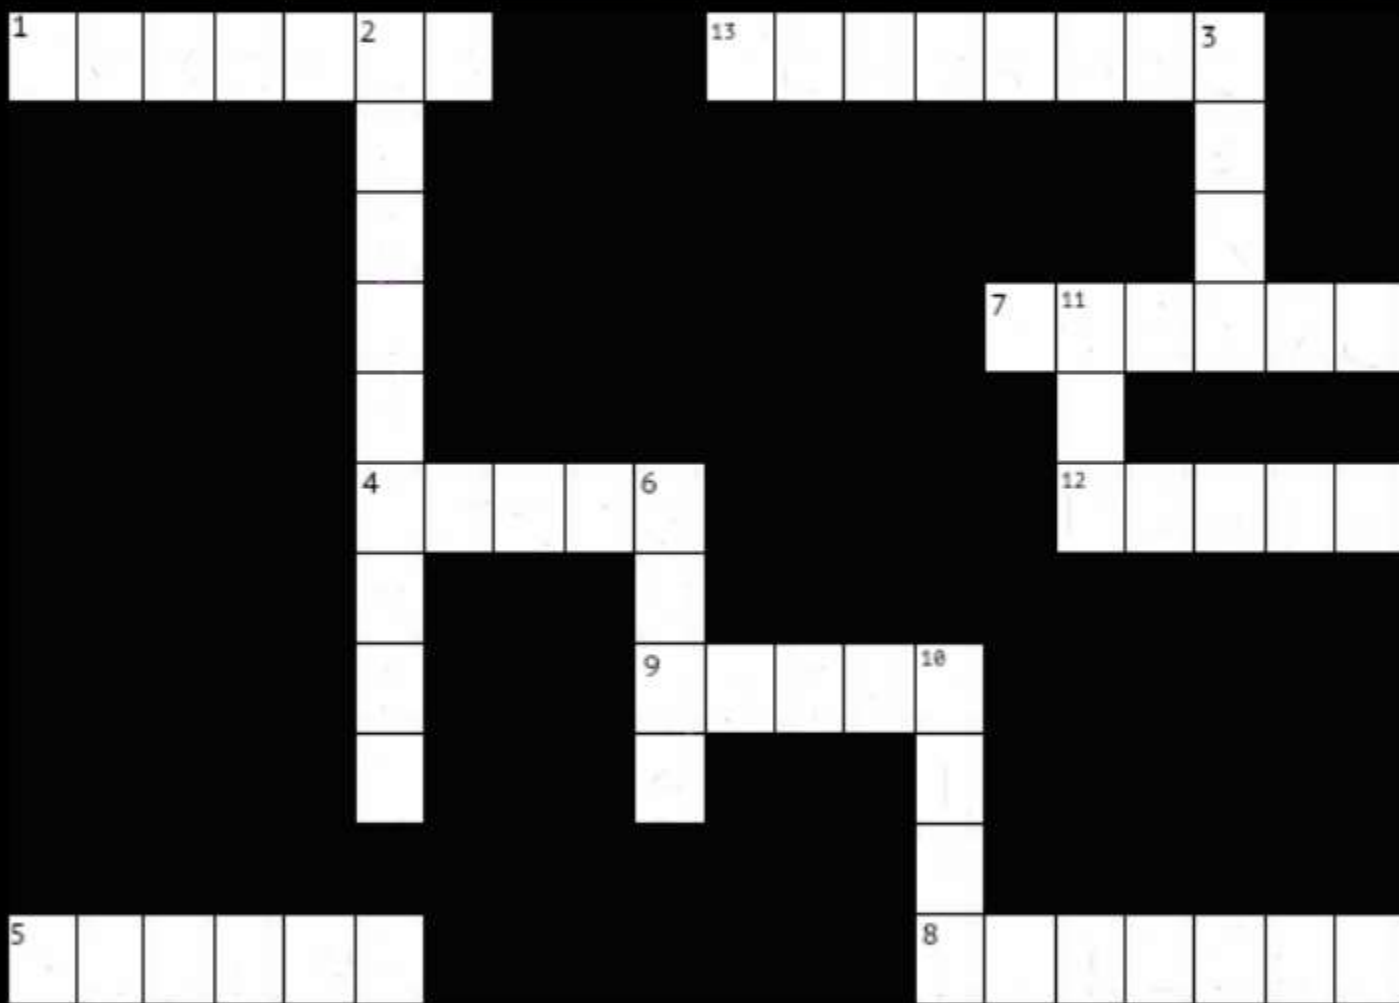

Currently the BT is still alive and has 6 BTs kills, 4 of them solo. 17 LTs kills, all solo. Countless infantry, we also named the tank Agatha, in the honour of the player who kept us supplied.
